Darkness descended on the house- hold early that night, but not rest. Plans and more plans whirled through James Nelson's tired head for hours. Mergat, thick as lead, asleep, lay very still, pondering many things—Nancy mostly. This change was going to be hard for her. Louise had said they were spoiling her, and perhaps they had; but was their only daughter. No knowing what life would bring her later on, and they'd so wanted her to have a happy youth—a carefree youth. Parties. Gaiety. Good days. And Nancy was pretty—astonishingly pretty. Somehow she seemed made for just that life. Already a rung in her and lovely gowns hung in her closet awaiting the thrilling day. Moving cautiously, the girl's mother wiped away a tear.

In the room above Louise Nelson lay staring at a patch of brightness on the ceiling, drifting in from a street light far below. She too, was thinking about Nancy. "If only they'd taught her to be something besides a butterfly," she told herself. "This blow wouldn't come so hard. Not that the child hasn't got good courage, though. It showed to-night when she kept a stiff upper lip while her house of cards tumbled to pieces before her eyes. That's the pioneer spirit my father used to talk about, showing up in a sister generally dare say. But she can't do a thing to help. Not a thing. No training whatever. Not that she'd have time for training, poor thing. But I doubt if the girl has ever made a bed!"

Across the hall Aunt Nancy was fighting home-sickness. She adored her family. It was hard for her to leave them even for a week-end; and here she was destined to spend six months in Europe with those "crazy" Spear girls. It was all settled. In her relief at the suggestion Mrs. Spear had almost cheered over the telephone.

"I suppose," Aunt Judy scolded herself, "that any one would say I was in luck. A trip abroad and good money just when it's needed. But the truth is, I'd rather be at Edgemore cooking for the family. I do think they're all wonderful. Margaret's a trump. She's so ambitious for Nancy, yet she never whines. And Jack! He didn't consider anything except helping his father. Offered to give up Mary Ann, and he—Why, the boy worships that car!"

HEALTH MEANS CHARM AND HAPPINESS

Sparkling eyes and smiling lips are signs of health and vitality. Clear skin attracts. The really attractive girl is both happy and popular. Perhaps you are not really ill, but when the day's work is done you are too tired to enter into the good times that other women enjoy. For extra energy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound. It tones up your general health. Gives you more pep—more charm. Remember that 98 out of 100 women report benefit. Let it help you too.

And Nancy?" (Aunt Judy winced back the tears.) "I wanted to cry for her, poor darling! She's been so thrilled and excited over this debut."

As for the girl herself, she lay on her beautiful four-poster trying to assemble her shattered world. It seemed incredible that such a thing could happen—to her. It just couldn't be true. "Why, Edgemore," she mused, "it's—the jumping-off place. One might as well be buried alive. I don't see how even Mother can endure it, especially with no Aunt Judy to help out. Come to think of it, she's only one bathroom for the entire family!" She threw a glance toward the door that led to her own whitened bath; and, as if she could see into the closet that lay beyond, a vision of the new gowns hanging there, waiting her entrance into what Jack called "the social whirl," rose up before her, and the girl's eyes misted.

"I'll never wear them now," she pondered unhappily. "And my white frock evening gown? I wish I hadn't saved it for the great event. Maybe the shop will take it back, though. I'll never use it in—Edgemore. . . . I can't go to work like Jack, but what good am I? Aunt Louise was right. . . . I can't earn my salt, not to mention my silk stockings. . . . What's the girls say about the boys, when they hear the news? . . . Not that it matters. . . . I'd like to help him, but—I'm just useless. . . . No one would pay me. . . . No one would pay me!"

Nancy turned her head. The door was opening cautiously, and as she watched a beam of light lit the girl saw her brother, clad in pajamas and a bathrobe.

"What on earth do you want this time of night?" she questioned. "Is the house a-fire?" Without answering, Jack closed the two windows noiselessly and sat on the edge of Nancy's bed, drawing his knees up under his chin. "Sit," he began in a mysterious whisper. "I've got a perfectly corking idea. Have you ever forgotten Cousin Columbine's proposition?"

CHAPTER II.

Cousin Columbine's proposition! Nancy had not given it a thought since the week before when Jack, home from school for an unexpected Sunday, had come to the postman at the door and brought a letter into the dining room where the family was at dinner.

"It looks like a long-winded screed from Dad's venerable relative in Colorado," the boy observed. "You read it aloud, Aunt Louise." It took time to read the massive letter across the table where it landed within an inch of his aunt's plate. She said, regarding the address: "What for your father?"

"Read on, my dear. It may be very private. The old lady has been reading a long time. What can she want?"

"To spend her remaining days with us, perhaps," guessed Jack fearfully. "But I think his aunt drew some finely written papers from the envelope. 'What's she say, Aunt Lou?'"

"Give me time to find out, please," she returned with a touch of sarcasm; and then read: "Dear Cousin James. It is some months since any news of my far-distant relatives has reached me; and now I am writing to ask what I trust will not be regarded as a favor—"

"What'd I say?" broke in Jack. "She wants to live with us! I felt something—something ominous creep upon my spine when the postman handed me that letter. Go on, Cousin!"

Louise Nelson, always impatient at the interruption, paused for an aggravating moment before continuing: "—a favor. I suppose I am getting old."

"Oh, is that right?" burst irrepressibly from Jack again. "Why, she's a pioneer, isn't she? One of those covered wagon people who—"

"Shh," warned his mother; while her sister-in-law, throwing the boy what in the vernacular of her generation is known as "a hard look," said: "—for I find it more difficult to do for myself, and the neighbors feel that I should no longer remain alive at night in this large mansion!" Louise Nelson paused for just a moment as if awaiting her nephew's comment, but as none came, she went on: "I had hoped to secure the services of Mary Taylor, the daughter of our good postmaster; but, which, on the whole, I am relieved. Girls are not what they were in my day, but after all, blood will tell, so I am sending my daughter, Nancy, to start for Colorado as soon as—"

"Well, that of nerve!"

Find Mysterious Garden

Discovery Made by Youths Searching For Holy Cave

A mysterious flower garden, 15 acres in extent, and full of delicate perfumed plants in bloom, has been found in the wilderness surrounding Adam's Peak, the sacred mountain of Ceylon.

Nowhere in this garden was there even a square foot of waste land, nor was any plant more than three feet high; yet there was not a living seed to be found for miles around in the arid wilderness.

The discovery was made by a band of youths who set out from Colombo to search for the Holy Cave of Ceylon, believed to be in the neighborhood of Adam's Peak.

The cave, known as Deva Gubba, is one of the 16 places of special sanctity mentioned in the Pali Sanskrit of the Buddhist Scriptures.

All the other 15 are known, but no one has ever come back to tell of the finding of the Deva Gubba.

Chinese monks who dwell near Adam's Peak 40 years ago—pious men like the monks of St. Bernard—are believed to have known where it was, but they are all dead.

Many have tried to find the Holy Cave, but none has ever returned sane. Once a priest, confident in his sacred character, ascended so far that the light he kindled at night was observed beneath the overhanging summit of the haunted mountain.

Next day he returned a maniac, unable to give any account of what he had seen.

In 1857 a band of Buddhist monks tried to scale the mountain. Their party seized some of them when they reached the base, and they turned back. The more stout-hearted carried on until they reached the summit they all fainted.

One of the monks, when he recovered his consciousness, declared that he had seen a magnificent temple revealed to him, adorned throughout with gold and precious gems, and in the interior, reported beyond all else a sacred foot-print.

Scientists Say Jellyfish Same As 250,000,000 Years Ago

Jellyfish which turned into stone an estimated 250,000,000 years ago have been found by Cornell University scientists near Cortland, N.Y.

This discovery, which has been announced by Cornell University, is the basis of the evolutionary theory that man may have descended from an ancient jellyfish. For the fossil jellyfish shows a body shape that has not changed appreciably in 250,000,000 years.

Horses took about 40,000,000 years to evolve from little, five-toed creatures, and in a period of much less than 1,000,000 years prehistoric man or a creature closely resembling modern humans, rose rapidly up the scale of development.

The fossil jellyfish are about the size of saucers. The concentric rings of stone which came from mineralized parts of the body indicate how little they differed from the jellyfish which float ashore in all the oceans.

They apparently had even then the stinging, nettle-like tentacles which pain swimmers to-day.

Receives Medal From Prince

Lieutenant Rescues Man Drowning Storm At Great Peril To Himself

Award for the bravest deed of the year, the Stanhope Gold Medal of the Royal Humane Society was presented at York House by the Prince of Wales to Lieut. Hugh Richardson of the H.M.S. Wolfhound.

Richardson saved the life of a sailor who had been overboard during a gale in Lamlash Bay, Isle of Arran.

The rescue was carried out in pitch darkness in the early hours of a stormy winter morning.

Edmund Archer, aged 19, was crossing the deck when a huge wave broke over the destroyer and swept him over the side.

Lieutenant Richardson heard the cry "Man overboard," and placing a luminous lifebelt over his head, dived from the bridge into the sea.

He put the lifebuoy round Archer, but was himself swept half a mile to sea and it was some time before a boat found him.

Civilians Being Trained

Germany Not Taking Any Chances On Air Raids

Germany is busily preparing itself against air raids, according to a well-informed British observer who recently stopped in Brussels, Belgium, on his way from Berlin.

The whole civil population, he declared, are being trained in what to do in an air raid. Berlin is now going on the way towards the paradise within.

Soon it will be no transitory glimpse, but a permanent feature of life, fostered by clouds and coldness. Let us labor, and pray, and wait, and the intervals of human frailty shall grow shorter and less dark.

Of our delight in God longer and brighter. Ill at last life shall be fought, but his love, eyes never grow dim. His smile never turn away.

THE SIGN OF A FAIR DEAL

THE Three-Star Imperial oval sign marks a place where you can buy with confidence; where you can be sure of good value and full measure.

It is the symbol of an organization that has steadily improved the quality and consistently reduced the price of petroleum and petroleum products—for gasoline prices today are lower than ever before.

The Three-Star Imperial oval sign stands for a fair deal to all: to you, the consumer, and to the labor engaged in making and marketing Imperial products. The thousands of Imperial Oil workers are well treated. Five thousand of them are part owners of the Company. They are paid good wages. They have sickness and death benefits and old age pensions which mean that in affliction or old age they and their families do not become dependent on funds which must be raised by taxation.

Because they are fairly treated, Imperial Oil employees work loyally, enthusiastically and enterprisingly. That is why, through the years, it has been possible steadily to improve the quality and consistently to lower the price of Imperial gasoline and oils.
